BYLAWS

Preamble

The International Life Sciences Institute (“ILSI”) is a nonprofit, scientific organization whose mission is to provide science that improves human health and well-being and safeguards the environment. ILSI was formed in 1978 in Washington DC, and over the last 40 years ILSI has established a global network of 17 entities to foster public-private scientific partnerships and address knowledge gaps to benefit public good.

To achieve its mission, ILSI brings together scientists from government, academia, and the life sciences industry. Participation of scientists from multiple sectors in addressing public health issues, together with the requirement that all ILSI activities must be directed to and carried out in an objective manner for the benefit of the public health, is a fundamental aspect of ILSI’s identity. ILSI’s commitment to multisector participation is reflected in ILSI’s bylaw provisions regarding the Board of Trustees, whose membership is set at an odd number, of whom at least half must be public sector trustees, with the remainder being private sector trustees.
